He believed it would have no effect at all, and, if it did, the effect would be only a temporary one, and the letter would be easily and soon forgotten. The church and politics had never been mingled in Irish affairs. The delegates were formally received last evening, when a musical concert was given, and brief addresses of welcome were made by Michael Martz, chairman of the reception committee, and Mayor Thompson. The latter, after giving the delegates a cordial greeting, continued at some length, alluding to the political standing of Detroit, which might be influenced by local or other causes in the question of civil liberty. He believed that the citizens of Detroit would roll up a vast majority in its favor. When the wave of fanaticish had rushed over the country Detroit stood fast. Not knowing anything about the city's future policy, and not wishing to introduce politics into his remarks, he felt certain that the city would ever stand up for the personal rights of her citizens. The mayor's remarks were received with rounds of applause. H. B. Scharman replied gracefully in behalf of his associates to the welcoming addresses.

When the convention was called to order, Mr. E. W. Voight, in behalf of the local browers and citizens of Detroit, welcomed the members of the convention. This was followed by an address of President H. B. Schamann, of Brooklyn. The secretary read the report of the board of trustees for the year. August, since which time Larcer has been trying at different times to get the girl to deny in grant and pool roem at ing at different times to get the girl to deny it. This she persistently refused to do. On Sunday he met her and persuaded her to come to the house, which was vacant, his wife be-ing absent. He took the girl up into the third story attle room and told her if she did not deny it he would hang her. On her re-fusal he locked her in the room, and informed her that he was going for a rope to hang her. She waited, in suspense, until she heard his footsteps approaching, when, overcome by her fears, she jumped through the window, carry-ing the sash with her, and fell a distance of thirty feet, lighting on a pile of bricks, break-ing her leg and sustaining internal injuries, from which it is feared she will die. On the facts coming to Sheriff Haus's knowledge he and knowing Larcer to be a desperate and knowing Larcer to be a desperate and determined man and well armed, they decided to wait a favorable opportunity for his capture. A close watch was kept upon the premises until midnight, when a raid was made. Larcer was found in the cellar with a navy revolver, with which he threatened to shoot revolver, with which he threatened to she the first man that advanced, but one of the party succeeded in getting behind him and knocked the pistol out of his hand, when be was handcuffed and carried to the jail at Hampton, where he is now confined. Larcer's place has borne an uneavory reputation for sometime, and his license was eccently taken away on account of his frequent violations of the Sunday law.

A report has just reached here that the girl died of her injuries this morning.

THE RACES.

When the sun rose in a cloudless sky yesterday morning the hearts of the horsement beat happily, and the levers of the turf looked forward with pleasant anticipations to a glorious day of racing. Early in the morning the harrows and rollers were put to work improving the track, which the steady wind which had blown all night had nearly entirely dried, and by noon it was in almost perfect condition. Shortly after noon the crowds began to arrive by train and equipage, and before 3 o'clock fully 4,000 persons were present. The ladies were out in great force, and the bright colors of their costumes made the grand stand beautifully brilliant. In the infield, along the stretch fence, there was a double row of buggles and carriages, and the duarter stretch and pool lawn were donsely througed with betting men investing in their favorites. On the upper porch of the club house there were a number of club members and their families. The races, of which there were five on the card, were all interesting savé the first, which caused considerable dissatisfaction on account of the terribly bad start. Of course in a field of green youngsters it is next to impossible to have a really fair send off, but no excuse can be offered when there are twenty-one breaks and nearly an hour's delay at the post. It was evident at the press stand that Holloway on Tolu was the cause of all the mischief, and his trickiness and the failure of the starter to rule him off at once of fine him. way on Tolu was the cause of all the mis-chief, and his trickiness and the failure of the starter to rule him off at once or fine him was condemned.

The other races were fine. The run for the The other races were fine. The run for the Mount Vernon stakes and the hurdle race were particularly good. The short horses were the lucky ones, and the visiting gamblers did not secure as much "department clerk money" (as they call money won here) as on the first day. The judges were Senator Beck, Col. Tom Ochiltree, and Col. Charles Stone; the timers, W. R. Babcock and Frank Hall, and the starter, Dave Clark. At 3:15, a quarter of an hour after the time announced, the bell rang for the first race on the programme, the youthful stakes for two-year-olds, and nine horses answered. When they reached the post there was an interminable delay. Cridge's entries and Ruby were over anxious to start, but Holloway, the jockey of Tolu, was the main cause of all the trouble. He persisted in maneuvering for an advantage. persisted in maneuvering for an advantage. The crowd on the stretch and grand stand grow impatient, and pounded with canes grew impatient, and pounded with canes and umbrellas.

At last, after fifty-six minutes' delay, the field got off with a bad start, the True Bine gelding being left at the post. Cridge's Chignen celt took the lead, the Opponent celt second, Jequita third, Ruby fourth, Tolu fifth, Emigrant sixth. Welster seventh, and Mittle Beighth. At the three-quarter pole Cridge's two celts were both in the order named, with the others bunched, Mittle B slightly leading them. Coming down the stretch the Opponent celt had a good lead and seemed a sure winner, but he ran into the fence and fell back to the rear. At the distance pole Tolu ran up with the Chignon celt and came in a winner by half a length, Mittle B third, Emigrant fourth; Ruby lifth, the Opponent celt sixth. Jequita seventh, and Welsher eighth. The following is the summary:

AN AWFUL MURDER

A Wealthy Maryland Farmer Killed in the Presence of His Wife and Others.

He Is Shot to Death and His Throat Cut from Ear to Ear.

BALTIMORE, MD., May 16.—Charles R. White, a wealthy farmer, residing in Howard county, near Hehester, a few miles from the Relay house, and who is a distant relative of ex-Congressman William Pinkney Whyte, was killed without provocation to-day by Charles Edward Hanson, aged 35, who shot his victim three times, and then cut his threat as he lay on the ground ten yards from a carriage containing Mrs. White and another lady. Both gentlemen were prominent in the county, and as there was no cause for a quarrel, Mr Hanson is undoubtedly insane. Mr. White, accompanied by the two ladies referred to, drove over to the home of Hanson this afternoon to negotiate for some corn which he wished to buy. Hanson had gene out to one of his fields to see after some laborers, and a messenger was dispatched for him, Mr. White necanwhile alighting and slipping up on the front porch. Hanson came home in response to the summons, and entering the back door asked his daughter who was the visitor, and was informed that Mr. White was waiting. Hanson went up stairs, and as it was afterwards discovered armed himself with a heavy Colt's revolver. He then went into the kitchen, picked up a large carving knife and walked hastily out on the porch where White was waiting. The maniac advanced until within three feet of White, when he raised his pistol and fired, the ball taking effect in the leg. White started to run when Hanson fired twice in rapid succession, both balls enthroat as he lay on the ground ten yards within three feet of White, when he raised his pistol and fired, the ball taking effect in the leg. White started to run when Hanson fired twice in rapid succession, both balls entering the head of the unfortunate victim, who fell dead on the lawn. In plain view of the ladies and of the entire Hanson family the murderer rushed to the corpse and with the carving knife cut the throat from car to ear. Mrs. White screamed out, "Oh, Mr. Hanson, what are you doeing," when he replied with great excitement, "It is the Lord's will. I promised my mother on my death bed that I would revenge my sister." There is absolutely no meaning in this, as the sister of Hanson has been dead for many years. Mr. White was sixty years old and a man of pleasant disposition. There is known to have been insanity in both branches of the Hanson family. The scene on the lawn when the ladies gathered around the corpse and the mirrederer still brandishing the bloody carving knife was distressing in the extreme. Assistance was summoned from a neighbor, and Hanson at once gave himself up and is now todged in jail. The coroner's inquest rendured a verdict that he was insane.

SOLDIERS OF THE SIXTIES

A Handful of Them March Once More Over the Line of the Grand Review, Escorted by the Local Military Orga zations and the Veteran Corps.

The Line Reviewed by the President, the Cabinet, a Gen. Sherman-The Business Meeting.

The Oration by Col. Maginais and Poem by George Alfred Townsend.

Had the voterans of the Army of the Potomae been permitted to choose and control every possible condition' surrounding or affecting their reunion, they could not have bettered any one in any particular. The splendid line of men that saluted the President of the United States yesterday moved through superb streets, under a clear blue sky, in the light of as brilliant a day as ever graced the month of early blooms and smiling weather. Many hundreds in that line were here eighteen years ago, when the army, of which they are a surviving reunant, marched in final review down Pennsylvania avenue under the eyes of their illustrious commander and a group of great ones, whose names they had helped build into the history of the world. The wealth of reminiscence their reappearance calls up is too vast for any words. It was a poetic sight, their parade, and a dramatic and touching one. They walked in the steps of many dead through a city whose rising grandeur is a fruit of that national progress they and their dead, by toil and suffering, made possible. Whatever could be done by the regular forces stationed in the district, by the local soldiery, and by the people of Washington, to make their gathering pleasurable or to acknowledge its diguity, was handsomely contributed. The parade itself, and the proceedings of the afternoon and evening, were faultlessly successful, and so to be remembered always by everyone who saw or participated in any of it. THE PARADE.

Of course the Riggs house was the center of attraction, for it was there that the Society of the Army of the Potomac started from, and the members gathered with commendable promptitude and in large numbers. Without the hotel the street was thronged with spectators, and the treasury steps were literally packed with ladies and children. On the west side of Fifteenth street the military es-
